Mother/Wife/RN-BSN/Lifelong learner

My Name is Krystal Glover, I am a Registered Nurse in Perioperative services at Emory University Midtown Hospital in Atlanta, Georgia. I am the proud wife of Christopher Glover and mother to four beautiful children, two of whom attends Woodland Elementary school. My eight years of nursing experience includes being a Labor and Delivery nurse, Emergency Room nurse and now a surgical nurse which have all contributed to my philosophy of being a caring and good human being. This is a value that I am passionate and determined to cultivate within my children as they evolve into their unique talents. My roots of service to others was fostered at Clayton State University where I acquired over 3600 hundred hours of community service to the metro Atlanta area and neighboring states, as a member of AmeriCorps and the Simply Stunning Sigma Sigma Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.

I would like to rephrase the statement of “Why I want to be a member of the school council”. to a question of “Who wouldn’t want to be a member of the school council”? I could probably give you one hundred reasons on how I don’t have time as a fulltime working parent to do anything extra. Even though that seems to be the challenge of most parents today. On the other hand, the number one reason for being a part of the Woodland Elementary school council is simple: I want to be more involved in my children’s education. Who wouldn’t want to help promote a better future for the youth of their community, and who wouldn’t better understand the concerns, the challenges, and the solutions better than a mom like me. Not only am I relatable on so many levels, I genuinely care, not only about my kids future but the kids in my community. I understand the importance of how a good education and safe learning environment can lead to alleviating health disparities, developing good coping mechanism in a world where changes are inevitable. We need more parental involvement in schools. We need more individuals motivated in fostering an environment that will create responsible and confident kids who are not afraid to be Caring and Good Human Beings. If given the opportunity I vow to listen, learn and be a part of the process in making sure that the students of Woodland Elementary continues to thrive academically and emotionally. Thank you.
